Common Council for American Unity.

Organized March 1918, under title Foreign Language Information Service, is a division of the United States Committee on Public Information; maintained from May-Aug. 1919 by a special emergency fund of the Carnegie Corporation; became an independent organization Aug. 1919, acting also as a bureau of the Community Service, Inc., Aug.-Dec. 1919, and of the American Red Cross, Feb. 1920-May 1921; on May 18, 1921 it separated from the Red Cross and became entirely independent.
Incorporated Nov. 1920. Cf. The Interpreter, v. 9, no. 8, Nov./Dec. 1920, p. 114.
On Nov. 22, 1930, a new corporation was formed under the name Common Council for American Unity, and on June 12, 1940, public announcement was made that the work, assets and obligations of the Foreign Language Information Service were transferred to the new corporation. While technically a new corporation, the Common Council for American Unity was, for practical purposes, simply a change of name.
Its headquarters were in New York City.
In Mar. 1959 the Common Council for American Unity and the American Federation of International Institutes merged to form the American Council for Nationalities Service.
